Qn-2: What are your goals and aspirations?

Ans: My only goal is to see myself as a developer in FAANG within two years. And my aspiration is valuing continuous learning, self-improvement, and development.

Qn-3: What are the first steps you will take to build your personal brand?

Ans: There are some following points that we should focus on:

- I. Defining particular vocation:
 - Specify a particular area or career path to stand out and become an expert.
- II. Being active online:
 - Creating professional profiles on platforms like LinkedIn, Twitter and other relevant networks.
- III. Building active network
- IV. Building habit of seeking feedback from expert

Qn-4: How does personal branding differ from self-promotion, and why is this distinction important?

Ans: The main distinction between personal branding and self-promotion is that comprehensive, long term strategy to show your values, skills and identity both personally and professionally for personal branding, while in the case of self-promotion, could be short term goals and immediate achievements such as landing a job without giving any comprehensive identity about themselves.

Now, coming to the point of importance of knowing the distinction between these two, personal branding always focuses on building meaningful relationships, authenticity and true values, while self-promotion just emphasizes immediate gains and individual achievement which doesn't help anyone to go for a long run. So, knowing this distinction is vital for one's personal growth, development, credibility and genuine professional reputation.

Qn-5: What are you most proud of?

Ans: I am most proud in the acknowledgment that my parents derive satisfaction from my life choices. Their pride in me is a testament to the diligence I have applied to every decision with values and integrity.
